PROGRAM FOR MENTALLY ILL CHEMICAL ABUSERS (MICA)

Established in 1995, the Mentally Ill Chemical Abusers (MICA) Program is a residential program for adults suffering from both mental illness (schizophrenia and other related disorders) and substance abuse, treating the two disorders as well as their interaction. Since 2018, the program is offered to women.

Program Approach

The MICA program is based on a modified therapeutic community approach, incorporating characteristics specific to mental health issues. This approach is based on self-help, mutual support, positive reinforcement, and peer influence, focusing on each individual's particular needs. Residents learn through participating in a variety of activities, therapeutic workshops, and psycho-educational groups, during which the individual takes on various roles and responsibilities.

Services are provided in collaboration with the resident's medical team, family, and support network. A multidisciplinary team oversees the medical and psychological needs of each individual from the time of admission to their reintegration into mainstream society. Family support services are also available.
